You have found us at a time when treatment options for multiple myeloma are advancing at an exciting pace, and there are many reasons to be encouraged and hopeful. A lot more is known about myeloma today than in the past.

At the Multiple Myeloma Research Foundation (MMRF) we have seen evidence that the more knowledgeable you become, the more empowered you are to make decisions and choices that lead to better care. This kit will help you find the information and opportunities available to you.

ABOUT THE MULTIPLE MYELOMA RESEARCH FOUNDATION

The Multiple Myeloma Research Foundation (MMRF) was established in 1998 by identical twin sisters Kathy Giusti and Karen Andrews shortly after Kathy’s diagnosis with multiple myeloma. Kathy and Karen soon learned that little progress against this disease had been made in decades and that myeloma patients had few treatment options. They decided that it was time to accelerate change. Their mission was to ensure more access to better treatments and bring the promise of a cure for every myeloma patient.

Since its founding, the MMRF has remained steadfast in the pursuit of its mission. It is now the leading cancer research organization focused on the development and delivery of more precise therapies, and it is aggressively pursuing a world without myeloma. Working with its partners in industry, research, government, and academia, the MMRF has helped launch 13 new drugs in the past 17 years, an achievement that has almost tripled the life expectancy for myeloma patients. The MMRF is a patient-focused organization that stands with the entire myeloma community and is speeding the discovery of cures through precision medicine. Driven by data and innovative research, the MMRF is committed to empowering every patient with precisely what he or she needs to prevent or defeat multiple myeloma.

As the multiple myeloma community’s most trusted source of information, the MMRF supports patients from the time of diagnosis throughout the course of the disease. All information on the MMRF website (www.themmrf.org) is organized by disease stage, so patients can get the information they need, when they need it.
